WE AND MY METEORITE

Artist Kate Patten is interested in all things astral and her latest work, the centrepiece of this summer's Exhibition Road Show, will be based on something that has fallen to Earth, she tells Ben Luke.

"All right up at the end of the world at the Olympics. exhibitions! Every exhibition has to have a bit of this world to it, the actual body of the exhibition is the final outcome of the actual art of the exhibition."

This plangent is going to be the Exhibition Road Show, and it's going to be the act on the front of the show, and by the end of the show, the artist will be doing a performance of his own. The themes and ideas that we are exploring are about the relationship between the natural world and the human world.

"We are exploring the relationship between the natural world and the human world. We are exploring the idea that the natural world is the source of our inspiration and our creativity. We are exploring the idea that the human world is the source of our inspiration and our creativity. We are exploring the idea that the natural world and the human world are interdependent, and that they cannot exist without each other."

This plangent is going to be the Exhibition Road Show, and it's going to be the act on the front of the show, and by the end of the show, the artist will be doing a performance of his own. The themes and ideas that we are exploring are about the relationship between the natural world and the human world.

"We are exploring the relationship between the natural world and the human world. We are exploring the idea that the natural world is the source of our inspiration and our creativity. We are exploring the idea that the human world is the source of our inspiration and our creativity. We are exploring the idea that the natural world and the human world are interdependent, and that they cannot exist without each other."

Ben Luke